It has been held that, under a provision that no action shall be maintained against a municipality unless it shall appear by and as an allegation of the complaint that the officer to whom the claim was presented has neglected or refused to adjust or pay it for a specified period after presentment, such neglect or refusal is an essential part of claimant's cause of action—Casey v. New York, 111 N.E. 764, 217 N.Y. 192—Johannes v. City of New York, 12 N.Y.S.2d 430, 257 App.Div. 197, affirmed 24 N.E.2d 489, 281 N.Y. 825.

(1) The rule stated in the text has been announced—Bernreither v. New York, 89 N.E. 1096, 196 N.Y. 506—Foley v. New York, 37 N.Y.S. 465, 1 App.Div. 586.

(2) In some cases, the view was expressed that the statutory provision in question related to, or affected, the remedy or procedure, and not the right or cause of action—Sheehy v. New York, 54 N.E. 749, 160 N.Y. 139—Missano v. New York, 54 N.E. 744, 160 N.Y. 123.

(3) It has also been stated that such a provision is not a limitation on the right of action but creates a

Compliance before bringing action

In a case in which the view was taken that the statute involved was a restriction on the exercise of the right of action and not on the right itself, the rule was announced that a statute requiring the presentation of a claim must be complied with before bringing an action, whether or not the statute in specific terms prohibits the bringing of an action without such compliance.—*Town Council of Town of Hudson v. imposing such requirement does not apply to an action brought in another state,⁷⁸ on the theory that such a statute goes to the remedy and not to the right.⁷⁹

While an examination of the claimant by the officer authorized to adjust and settle claims, for which provision is sometimes made, is not a condition precedent to the maintenance of an action on the claim,⁸⁰ claimant's ignoring a subpoena or notice to appear for examination has been regarded as a bar to an action on the claim.⁸¹ The provision for such examination is not a statute of limitations,⁸² and the holding of the examination neither limits nor extends the time within which the action may be begun.⁸³

Purpose of requirement. A requirement for the presentation of a claim before bringing action is intended for the protection or benefit of the municipality,⁸⁴ and not of claimant.⁸⁵ The purpose of such requirement is to permit municipal officials to make due investigation as to the merits of the claim,⁸⁶ to prevent actions on fictitious claims,⁸⁷ to permit the preparation of a defense to the claim,⁸⁸ or to permit settlement or allowance of the claim without litigation or unnecessary expense if settlement or allowance is deemed proper.⁸⁹

Retrospective operation of statutes or ordinances.

The statutes under discussion are usually not given a retroactive effect,⁹⁰ and this construction may be necessitated by a saving clause in the statute.⁹¹ On the other hand, its application to existing claims may be warranted or required by the language of the statute⁹² or of a charter provision adopted by the corporation itself.⁹³ The repeal of a statute pending an action has been held to operate on such action on the ground that the statutory provision affected the remedy only and the action was based on common-law principles.⁹⁴

d. To What Claims, Actions, or Proceedings Requirement Applicable

The determination as to what claims, actions, or proceedings a requirement for notice or presentation of claim before commencing action or proceeding against a municipal corporation applies depends largely on the terms of the provision imposing the requirement.

The question as to what claims, actions, or proceedings provisions as to notice or presentation of claims apply must be decided by a reference to the terms of the particular statute or charter provision.⁹⁵ On the ground that certain statutory or charter provisions as to the presentation of a claim are in derogation of the common law,⁹⁶ it has been held that such provisions should be strictly construed in order to permit them to operate only on those claims, actions, or proceedings to which it was intended that they should apply,⁹⁷ but the view has been taken that the statutes apply to all classes of claims not expressly excepted in the law itself.⁹⁸ The general statutes, other than those relating only to personal injuries and to actions for torts in general, vary in their phraseology in the different jurisdictions, with the result that many of them have been construed as embracing all claims,⁹⁹ while other statutes are held to apply only to particular types of claims,¹ such as claims arising out of a contract,² or claims for torts.³

Certain provisions of the type here considered which in terms are applicable to actions against a municipality do not apply to actions against a body having a corporate entity related to, but separate from, the municipality,⁴ such as provisions requiring the presentation of a claim,⁵ or the neglect or refusal of a certain officer to adjust or to pay the claim.⁶

Suits in equity. Usually provisions for notice or presentation of a claim do not apply to actions in equity,⁷ even though incidental damages are demanded.⁸ Where no ground for equitable relief by injunction exists, the proceeding may not be treated as an action for damages in the absence of the presentation of a claim.⁹ Sometimes the statute is specifically made applicable to actions in equity in certain cases,¹⁰ and, subject to certain limitations,¹¹ the terms of a general statute requiring the presentation of a claim have been regarded as sufficiently broad to include actions of an equitable nature as well as actions at law.¹²

e. Form and Contents

Generally, a statement of claim should be sufficient to permit a determination as to its merits, and, where duly required, it is essential that the claim should be in writing, itemized, and verified.

A statement of a claim should contain information sufficient to enable the body to which it is presented to pass on it,¹³ and there can be no recovery for claims or demands not contained in the statement.¹⁴ However, technical or absolute accuracy is not required,¹⁵ and a substantial compliance with the statute is usually sufficient.¹⁶ When so required by statute, the statement of a claim should be in writing,¹⁷ and itemized.¹⁸

Form and contents of claim presented for audit and payment in general are discussed supra § 2175; and form and contents of notice or claim with respect to action for torts supra § 925.

Amount claimed. Under some provisions the exact amount claimed as damages is not an essential part of the claim.¹⁹ In case of unliquidated damages, it has been held that the statement need not state the amount claimed.²⁰

Verification. When so required, the statement of the claim should be verified.²¹ There is authority for the view that, where there are several claimants, both or either may properly verify the claim.²² The view has been taken that the presentation of a verified claim was not necessary in a case in which plaintiff had made a payment, under duress, to defendant corporation.²³

f. Presentation or Service

There must be due compliance with requirements as to the manner of presenting claim or giving notice before commencing an action against a municipal corporation, including requirements as to the person by whom, or to or on whom, claim is to be presented or notice given, and as to the time for presenting claim or giving notice.

While provisions as to the manner of presentation or service must be followed,²⁴ a substantial compliance is usually sufficient.²⁵ Where no particular manner of presenting a claim is designated, the statute should be given a reasonable or practical construction in this regard.²⁶ Usually presentation to, or service on, the municipal council or other governing body need not be made while such body is in session.²⁷ While service should ordinarily be made in the office of the designated officer,²⁸ the fact that a claim is presented outside the office is not fatal where the officer does not insist on service in the office.²⁹ The officer who is to be served may make an acknowledgment of service.³⁰

Statutes in force when a claim arises will govern the manner of presenting a claim in the absence of a contrary legislative intention.³¹

By whom presented or served. Usually a notice or claim may and must be given or presented by claimant³² or by his duly authorized agent or representative.³³ Presentation of a claim by one who has assigned it as security is sufficient to enable him to sue, where presentation is made with the knowledge and acquiescence of the assignee.³⁴

To whom or on whom presented or served. The claim must be presented or notice must be given to the particular officer, board, or body designated in the statute.³⁵ Usually, however, presentation or notice to a representative of a designated body is regarded as a sufficient compliance.³⁶ Thus for this purpose a city clerk³⁷ or a city auditor³⁸ has been regarded as the representative of the municipal council or other governing body, and in general the officer who is the custodian of the records and files of the governing body is the proper officer to receive a claim or notice.³⁹ Likewise, the courts have regarded as sufficient, presentation to, or service on, an assistant of the designated officer,⁴⁰ or other authorized representative of such officer.⁴¹ Presentation to, or service on, a particular officer has been upheld by virtue of a general statutory provision governing service on a board or body.⁴²

Where the claim or notice ultimately comes into the hands of the proper officer, the mere fact that it was originally delivered to a different officer is not, it has been held, a fatal defect;⁴³ but there must have been an intention and an attempt to comply with the statute,⁴⁴ and it must appear that it has been acted on by the proper officer.⁴⁵

Plaintiff need not make service on officers or boards other than those designated in the statute,⁴⁶ and, where a statute provides for presentation to the mayor and common council, it is not necessary to give a separate notice to the mayor where the mayor and common council constitute the board of audit and the mayor and board of aldermen constitute the council.⁴⁷ In order that a municipal corporation may take advantage of an alleged failure to serve notice on a particular officer, it must appear that such an officer has been duly appointed and that he has an office at a fixed place.⁴⁸

Time for presentation or service. Under some statutes or charter provisions adopted by a municipal corporation a claim must be presented within the time designated after maturity or accrual in order to permit a recovery thereon,⁴⁹ but some statutes have been so construed as not to require the presentation of a claim within a specified time after the accrual of the cause of action.⁵⁰

g. Objections, Waiver, or Loss of Right to Object, and Excuse for Noncompliance

While the right of the officer to whom the claim is to be presented to waive compliance with the requirement has been denied, according to some authorities the municipal corporation may not rely on want of verification of the claim where the claim was rejected or was not paid for reasons other than want of verification.

There is authority for the view that compliance with a statute requiring the presentation of a claim cannot be waived by the officer to whom it is to be presented.⁵¹ The mere retention by the municipal authorities of a claim without objection as to its sufficiency does not constitute a waiver of the right to rely on the defects in the claim,⁵² as, for example, the lack of verification.⁵³ It has been held, however, that, where the mode or extent of itemizing an account is not specifically fixed by statute, the municipal authorities owe to claimant the duty to call to his attention defects in itemization,⁵⁴ and that the municipal corporation may not take advantage of the failure to verify the claim where it was rejected solely on the ground that the municipality was not liable,⁵⁵ or where it was not paid solely because there were no funds available.⁵⁶

The unreasonable refusal of a board to certify or approve a claim or bill,⁵⁷ or to issue a warrant,⁵⁸ is a sufficient excuse for failure to obtain such certification, approval, or warrant, and a municipal council cannot avoid liability on the part of the corporation by refusing or neglecting to act on a claim.⁵⁹ The failure of certain officers to approve a claim, however, does not excuse claimant's failure to present it to another officer as required by statute, where there is no statutory requirement for approval.⁶⁰ The failure of an agent of claimant to present a claim as required by statute does not excuse noncompliance.⁶¹

Some statutory provisions authorizing the court to correct, supply, or disregard irregularities and omissions in a notice of claim do not authorize such action where the manner or time of service is involved.⁶²

Time for objection. Where presentation is a condition precedent going to the jurisdiction of the subject matter, there is authority for the view that the objection that the requirement as to claim or notice has not been complied with may be taken at any time;⁶³ but the rule is otherwise where the statute is in the nature of a statute of limitations,⁶⁴ and in the latter case noncompliance is waived by defendant's failure to raise the question by proper pleading.⁶⁵ It has been held that on a hearing as to damages after default, defendant corporation may show its nonliability for want of notice.⁶⁶

§ 2200. Defenses

- a. Action against municipal corporation
- b. Action by municipal corporation

a. Action against Municipal Corporation

Courts do not favor defenses to honest demands against municipal corporations, based on mere irregularities and informalities; failure to present a claim is a matter of defense under some statutes.

It has been stated broadly that courts do not favor defenses to honest demands against municipal corporations, based on mere irregularities and informalities.⁶⁷ Where one seeks to recover money paid under protest to avoid prosecution under an invalid ordinance, the invalidity of the ordinance is no defense.⁶⁸

It has been stated broadly that a municipal corporation may make the same defenses against the state as it may make against an individual in the absence of a charter or other statutory provision to the contrary.⁶⁹

Want of funds as a defense to claim under contract is discussed supra § 1024.

Want of due presentation of claim. Under some statutes the fact that a claim has not been presented for allowance is a matter of defense,⁷⁰ and in some jurisdictions under a statute which makes the failure to present a claim within a specified time from accrual a bar to the claim, such failure is defensive matter.⁷¹ The right to rely on the failure to present a claim as a defense may be lost by failure of the corporation to set it up,⁷² and the right of the corporation to rely on defects in the statement of claim may be lost or waived.⁷³ Failure to present a claim required by statute as a condition precedent to the right to costs is not a defense to the action.⁷⁴

Failure of plaintiff to deposit security for costs as required in certain cases in actions against a municipal corporation does not constitute a defense to the merits.⁷⁵

Set-off or counterclaim. A municipality may set up any facts constituting a set-off;⁷⁶ and a statute authorizing actions to be brought by, and in the name of, the state to recover municipal money unlawfully obtained does not deprive a municipality of the right to set off such cause of action in an action brought against it.⁷⁷ It has been stated broadly that a tax levied by a municipal corporation cannot be allowed as a set-off or counterclaim.⁷⁸

The fact that a municipal corporation was exercising a governmental function with respect to an occurrence on which an action for tort by such corporation is based does not constitute a defense to such action.

The fact that an action by a municipal corporation for tort is based on an occurrence in which the corporation was exercising a governmental function and that it cannot, therefore, be charged with negligence, is not a defense,⁷⁹ and in such case the contributory negligence of an employee of the corporation is not imputable to it so as to prevent a recovery.⁸⁰

Set-off or counterclaim. While it has been held that a general statute authorizing set-off does not apply where an action is brought by a municipality in its governmental capacity,⁸¹ certain special statutes confer the right of set-off or counterclaim on a private corporation when it is sued by a municipality.⁸²

§ 2201. Time to Sue and Limitations

a. In general

b. Prematurity and provision for delay before bringing section

a. In General

Some statutes provide for a special period of limitations applicable to actions against municipal corporations.

Subject to certain qualifications, generally statutes of limitation may run for and against municipal corporations, as discussed in the title Limitations of Actions § 17, and the general statutes may apply notwithstanding an attempted shortening, by a statutory provision, of the period within which a claim against the municipality can be enforced, where such provision is invalid.⁸³ Some statutes provide for a special period of limitations in case of actions against municipal corporations⁸⁴ and such statutes are usually held valid,⁸⁵ unless contrary to some special constitutional provision.⁸⁶ Generally a statutory or charter provision for a special period of limitation in an action against a municipality is mandatory,⁸⁷ and it is the duty of the municipality to invoke such provision.⁸⁸ A statutory provision that an action may not be maintained against the municipality unless commenced within a specified time after the cause of action accrues is one of limitations and does not prescribe a condition precedent, with respect to a common-law right of action.⁸⁹

Some special statutes of limitation have been held to apply only to actions on contracts or obligations arising from, or growing out of, contracts.⁹⁰ Where a statute of limitations is made applicable only to certain actions against a named municipality, only the municipality can take advantage thereof.⁹¹ A statutory provision validating certain evidences of indebtedness of municipal corporations does not create a cause of action to which a statute of limitations applicable to statutory actions will apply.⁹² A statute which imposes on a municipal officer the duty to seek recovery of money within a specified period does not, it has been held, prevent the municipality from bringing an action after such period.⁹³

Running of statute. Where a fund is held in trust by a municipality and there has been no repudiation of the trust, the statute of limitations is not a defense.⁹⁴ The presentation of a claim to the proper officer of the city, although a necessary preliminary to enable an action to be brought against the city, is not the commencement of an action so as to stop the running of the statute.⁹⁵ Under a statutory provision that the time of the continuance of a stay by statutory prohibition is not a part of the time limited for the commencement of an action, the running of the statute of limitations is suspended for the period after the presentation of claim during which a statute prevents the bringing of an action,⁹⁶ but the running of the statute is not suspended beyond such period for the period taken for the examination of plaintiff as claimant pursuant to statutory authorization, which was adjourned by stipulation between the claimant and the examining officer.⁹⁷

Waiver or estoppel. An agent of a municipality of limited authority may not, without express authorization waive the right of the municipality to invoke a special statute of limitations which is mandatory,⁹⁸ and such agent may not, by his conduct, estop the municipality from invoking such statute.⁹⁹

b. Prematurity and Provision for Delay before Bringing Action

An action begun before the maturity of demand against a municipal corporation is premature. Some statutes or charter provisions require a delay after presentation of claim for a reasonable time or for a specified period before bringing action against a municipal corporation.

An action begun before the maturity of demand against the municipality is premature and should be dismissed.¹ In the absence of a provision for delay it has been held that plaintiff need not delay the bringing of action after he has complied with the statutory requirement for notice or claim.² Under a provision that no action may be brought until the claim has been rejected, time must be given for action on the claim before action may be brought.³

Provision for delay for reasonable time. Some statutory or charter provisions require delay in bringing action until a reasonable time has elapsed for investigating or passing on the claim presented.⁴ Some statutes of this description apply only to claims on contract.⁵

Provision for delay for specified time. Statutory or charter provisions sometimes require that no action shall be brought or maintained against the municipality until after a specified time from the presentation of a claim.⁶ The validity of such provisions has been recognized,⁷ even with respect to a common-law action.⁸ Such a provision has been construed as creating a condition precedent,⁹ and 44 C.J. p 1469 note 24.

The purpose of the statute is to permit the municipality to investigate the validity of the claim and determine whether it desires to pay or settle it without litigation.—McGovern v. City of New York, supra—44 C.J. p 1469 note 24 [a].

Service of summons within specified period after presentation of claim does not constitute compliance with requirement of delay of specified period before prosecution or maintenance of action, notwithstanding complaint is not served until after the expiration of such period.—McGovern v. City of New York, supra.

Extension of time

(1) Where plaintiff had waited for a period longer than that required by the statute before bringing action, it was held that it was not shown that the action was brought prematurely, notwithstanding reservations of additional time for adjustment of claim in stipulations between plaintiff as claimant and a municipal officer adjourning hearings for the examination of claimant by such officer as authorized by statute, in view of certain admissions in the answer of defendant municipal corporation and its failure to plead as an affirmative defense the special agreement in the stipulations.—Di Bartolo v. City of New York, 56 N.E.2d 71, 293 N.Y. 114, motion denied 56 N.E.2d 749, 293 N.Y. 756.

(2) The power of the municipal officer to waive the effect of his stipulation has been recognized.—Angelo v. City of New York, 53 N.Y.S. 2d 487, 183 Misc. 391.

(3) Notwithstanding plaintiff had waited more than the required period before bringing action, however, it was held that the action was premature because it was in violation of a stipulation adjourning the examination of claimant, which provided a delay of a specified period after the conclusion of the examination before bringing action, especially in view of claimant's failure to appear for examination on the adjourned date.—Angelo v. City of New York, supra.

is not a statute of limitations.¹⁰

There must be at least a substantial compliance with a provision of this type.¹¹ The requirement may not be waived by a municipal officer.¹²

Some statutes of this nature are limited in their application to claims of a specified nature,¹³ while others have a broader application,¹⁴ and include all actions.¹⁵

It has been stated generally that a noncompliance with a statutory provision for delay may be taken advantage of by defendant at any stage of the proceedings.¹⁶

§ 2202. Jurisdiction

Questions as to jurisdiction of actions to which a municipal corporation is a party are determinable largely by local statutes and rules of practice.

Usually a municipal corporation may be sued in courts of general jurisdiction,¹⁷ but statutes sometimes contain provisions conferring exclusive jurisdiction of actions by or against a city on a particular court.¹⁸ In various decisions the right of particular courts to exercise jurisdiction in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party has been recognized¹⁹ or denied.²⁰

Consent of the officers or agents of the municipality does not give jurisdiction of actions where jurisdiction is not conferred by law.²¹

Where, pending an action against a town, such town is made a city by an act of the legislature, the court has the same jurisdiction over the city as it would have had over the town.²²

The right of a municipal corporation to waive objection as to jurisdiction has been recognized.²³

Action against foreign municipal corporation. It has been held that whether an action against a municipal corporation of a particular state shall be entertained by a court of another state is to be determined by the law of such other state,²⁴ particularly where the cause of action has arisen in such other state.²⁵ According to some authorities such an action may be entertained under some circumstances.²⁶ The right to take jurisdiction of an action against a municipal corporation of another state has been denied in certain cases, however,²⁷ and a plea to the jurisdiction in a suit for injunction and an accounting against the municipal council of a foreign municipal corporation of another state has been sustained.²⁸

§ 2203. Venue

- a. In general
- b. Change of venue

a. In General

According to some authorities an action against a municipal corporation must be brought in the county in which such corporation is situated in the absence of statute fixing venue elsewhere, but this rule is not accepted universally, at least to the fullest extent.

fines the venue of an action against a municipal corporation to the county in which such corporation is situated;²⁹ actions against municipal corporations have been described as local and not transitory,³⁰ and the rule has been stated that as a general rule such actions must be brought in the county in which the municipality is situated,³¹ or in the courts of the municipality,³² except where venue is expressly fixed elsewhere by statute.³³ In some jurisdictions, the rule is applied, even though the action is one which ordinarily would be regarded as local to, and would be tried in, a county other than that in which defendant corporation is situated;³⁴ but in other jurisdictions the rule seems to be confined to actions which ordinarily would be regarded as transitory,³⁵ and actions against municipalities which are in their nature local to a county or place other than that in which defendant has its situs are properly brought in such other place or county.³⁶ In still other jurisdictions, certain actions against municipal corporations are described as transitory,³⁷ but the venue is in the county in which defendant corporation is situated;³⁸ however, by force of statute an action may be maintained in a different county.³⁹

Some statutory or charter provisions in terms fix the place of trial of actions or proceedings against a municipal corporation in the county in which such corporation is situated.⁴⁰ Some provisions of this

Action involving official action of municipal officers

It has been held that, where an action in which a municipal corporation is a defendant, involves the official conduct of its officers in the county of its situs, the proper venue is such county.—Boyd & Goforth v. First Nat. Bank, 155 S.E. 577, 199 N.C. 687—44 C.J. p 1471 note 47 [c] (1).

Question as to venue

Whether a municipal corporation may be sued elsewhere than in the county in which it is situated is a question as to venue and not as to jurisdiction.—Scaife Co. v. Dornack, 1 N.W.2d 856, 211 Minn. 349.

Action pertaining to real property

(1) It has been stated that an action against a municipal corporation is inherently local, apparently with respect to the county in which such corporation is situated, except where the action pertains to real property.—Swanson v. City of Sioux Falls, 266 N.W. 115, 64 S.D. 175.

(2) It has been stated that there is an established exception to the general rule that an action against a municipal corporation must be brought in the county of its domicile or where it is situated, in actions which pertain to real estate, which generally must be brought in the county where the land lies.—Cooper v. type apply to actions or proceedings which are transitory,⁴¹ or, according to some decisions which pertain to, or grow out of, governmental affairs of the municipality,⁴² and do not control actions or proceedings for the recovery of real property which by another statute are assigned to a local forum.⁴³

It has been held that certain statutory provisions regulating the venue of actions against a "corporation" do not apply to actions against municipal corporations,⁴⁴ but a contrary view in this respect has been taken with respect to some statutes.⁴⁵

A statutory provision authorizing defendant municipal corporation to have the cause transferred for trial to a county other than that in which plaintiff resides and other than that in which defendant municipal corporation is situated does not permit plaintiff to commence an action in a neutral county or to select his own forum.⁴⁶

Location in two counties. Where a municipality is partly situated within two counties, its situs, as between such counties, for purposes of venue is in the county in which its municipal offices and government are located,⁴⁷ in the absence of a statutory provision to the contrary.⁴⁸ Under a provision of the charter of a municipal corporation, which is co-extensive with several counties, that an action against such corporation shall be tried in the county within such corporation in which the cause of action arose or in a specified county within such corporation, an action must be tried in such specified county where the cause of action arose therein.⁴⁹

Effect of contract. The power of a municipality to contract to perform an obligation in a county other than that in which it is situated and thereby to fix the venue of an action to enforce the obligation has been recognized.⁵⁰

Waiver of objection. It has been held or recognized that a municipality may waive an objection with respect to the venue⁵¹ by entering an appearance without raising the question as to venue.⁵² Where an action is brought in a wrong county and defendant corporation has appeared and answered and a trial has been held, under some statutes the question as to dismissal or retention of the action is within the discretion of the trial court.⁵³ Where the corporation has instituted an action in a county other than the one in which it is located, it may not thereafter question the authority of the court, whose jurisdiction it has invoked, to proceed in the action.⁵⁴

b. Change of Venue

As a general rule a municipal corporation is entitled to have an action against it transferred for trial to the county in which it is situated, where the action should have been brought in such county.

When an action which should have been brought against a municipal corporation in the county in which it is situated is brought outside such county, the corporation has a right to demand a transfer of the cause to such county.⁵⁵ Under some statutes a

Change as between counties with which municipality coextensive

Under the provision of the Greater New York Charter that an action against the city of New York shall be tried in the county within the city in which the cause of action arose or in the county of New York, a motion to change the place of trial from a county within the city other change of venue, in certain cases, may be had from the county in which the corporation is situated,⁵⁶ as, for example, where local prejudice is shown to exist.⁵⁷ In some jurisdictions, where the action is properly brought in the county in which the corporation is situated, a change of venue may not be granted on the application of a single codefendant of the corporation.⁵⁸ Under some statutes a municipal corporation, as plaintiff, is entitled in some cases to a change of venue to a county other than that in which such corporation is situated and other than that in which defendant resides, is doing business, or is situated.⁵⁹

Defendant municipality may, by entry of appearance and pleading to the merits, waive the benefit of a statute permitting such municipality to have the cause transferred for trial to a county other than that in which plaintiff resides and other than that in which defendant municipality is situated.⁶⁰

§ 2204. Parties

- a. In general
- b. Joinder
- c. Intervention

a. In General

The question who are necessary or proper parties in actions by or against a municipal corporation or whether a municipal corporation is a necessary or proper party to an action between others depends largely on the nature of the action and the relief sought.

The question who are necessary or proper parties in actions by or against municipal corporations depends largely on the nature of the action and the relief sought,⁶¹ and a like rule applies in determining whether a municipal corporation is a necessary or proper party to an action between others.⁶² Where a cause of action exists in favor of the corporation, it is the proper party plaintiff in an action to enforce it.⁶³

Citizens or inhabitants of municipality. In some jurisdictions in actions against municipal corporations its citizens or inhabitants are not ordinarily necessary or proper parties,⁶⁴ but, by virtue of a statute, for the purpose of satisfying a judgment against the corporation out of their property, under rules discussed infra § 2212, its citizens or inhabitants have been regarded as parties.⁶⁵

The substitution of a municipality, as party defendant is proper where a statute imposes liability on such municipality for previously accruing causes of action against another municipality, which the substituted municipality has absorbed,⁶⁶ but no formal substitution of parties is required where the corporation which has commenced an action is dissolved, and a new corporation bearing the same name is organized and includes substantially the same inhabitants and territory.⁶⁷ than the county of New York to the county of New York should be granted where the cause of action arose in the county of New York—Battleman v. Hoffman's Estate, 13 N.Y.S. 2d 655, 257 App.Div. 987—Knowles v. City of New York, 75 N.Y.S. 725, 71 App.Div. 410.

Parties to action:

For tort see supra § 932.

On contract generally see supra §§ 1024-1026.

Municipal officer not necessary party

A municipal officer who had made acknowledgments to tax certificates before attorneys at law was not a necessary party to an action against the municipal corporation by such attorneys for fees allowed by statute for taking acknowledgments, since the fees to which attorneys as acknowledging officers were entitled were required to be paid into the municipal treasury and such officer was in no sense liable for them—Samson v. City of Newark, 15 A.2d 452, 125 N.J.Law 221.

62. Proper but not necessary party

While a municipal corporation which under the terms of deeds had acquired a fee-simple title to certain real property on the termination of the existence of one of the organizations which were joint grantees in such deed and had conveyed the property to another by deed reserving certain rights or privileges should properly have been made a party to a suit in equity by another of such joint grantees, which had continued as a body corporate, to obtain a determination as to such reserved rights or privileges, such municipal corporation was not a necessary party to such suit.—Woman's

Relief Corps No. 1 Mich. of City of South Haven v. South Haven City and Township Library Bd, 20 N.W. 2d 820, 313 Mich. 85.

Not proper party

The mayor and aldermen of a city were not proper parties to a suit in equity against the trustees of the public library of such city with respect to the construction of a building by such trustees, which was brought by an adjoining owner.—Howard v. Jersey City, 140 A 261, 102 N.J.Eq. 213.

b. Joinder

Whether a municipal corporation may or should be joined as a party to a particular action or whether another may or should be joined as a party to an action to which such a corporation is a party depends on the nature of the action, the relief sought, and the particular facts.

The propriety or necessity of the joinder of a municipal corporation as a party to an action or of the joinder of another as a party to an action to which such a corporation is a party depends on the nature of the action, the relief sought, and the particular facts.⁶⁸ Thus, in various instances, it has been held necessary or proper to join the municipality as a party defendant,⁶⁹ while in other instances the joinder of a municipality as a defendant has been held unnecessary.⁷⁰ The joinder of two corporations as defendants is improper where there is no basis in law for the alleged joint liability.⁷¹ Where a duty to perform a certain act which a municipal officer has refused to perform may be imposed on him by the judgment in an action against the corporation, such officer is a proper party defendant,⁷² but, where such an officer is not in default, he should not be made a party defendant.⁷³ Some statutes are construed as making municipal officers parties in their official capacity to an action against the corporation, even though they are not specifically designated as parties.⁷⁴ The failure to join a particular board as a party defendant in an action against a municipality may constitute merely a formal defect⁷⁵ which is not reached by a general demurrer, as discussed infra § 2207.

c. Intervention

Generally, rules applicable in civil actions apply in determining the propriety of intervention by a municipal corporation or to intervention in actions to which such a corporation is a party.

In accordance with general rules discussed in Equity §§ 160-163, and in the C.J.S. title Parties §§ 53-71, also 47 C.J. p 93 note 71-p 120 note 59, the right to intervene has been recognized in particular instances where the right has been sought by a municipal corporation,⁷⁶ or by a particular officer or board.⁷⁷ On the other hand, intervention has been regarded as improper or as properly denied in particular instances where the right has been sought by the corporation,⁷⁸ by a citizen,⁷⁹ or by a taxpayer seeking to assert a personal claim.⁸⁰

The time when intervention by a municipal corporation was sought has been considered in passing on a motion asking permission to intervene.⁸¹

§ 2205. Process

- a. In general
- b. Form and requisites
- c. Service
- d. Return and proof of service
- e. Objections and waiver; voluntary appearance

a. In General

Alias process may be issued for the appearance of defendant municipality where an action against it is pending in a particular county after a change of venue.

Where an action against a municipality is pending in a particular county after change of venue, the propriety of the issuance of alias process for appearance of defendant has been recognized.⁸²

Whatever process binds a municipal corporation binds its officers who are privy to its duties and affairs.⁸³

b. Form and Requisites

There should be due compliance with statutory provisions regulating the form and requisites of process in actions against municipal corporations.

Where the statute so provides, process against a municipal corporation should run against it in its corporate name.⁸⁴ A summons, however, has been held not to be vitiated because, in addition to directing that the corporation be summoned, it also names officers of the corporation,⁸⁵ and the fact that the summons directs that an officer of the municipality instead of the municipality shall be summoned is not necessarily a fatal defect under some statutes.⁸⁶ Under a statute providing that an action may be commenced by declaration, such declaration is in the nature of process which may be used in actions against municipal corporations.⁸⁷

c. Service

- (1) In general
- (2) Time and place
- (3) On whom service to be made
- (4) Manner of service

(1) In General

Process must be properly served on a municipal corporation in order to confer jurisdiction of an action against it, in the absence of waiver by appearance or otherwise.

Generally, at least in the absence of an appearance, process against municipal corporations must be properly served in order to confer jurisdiction.⁸⁸

According to some authorities the rule of strict construction applies to general or local provisions specifically regulating the service of summons in actions against municipal corporations,⁸⁹ and there must be specific compliance with such provisions.⁹⁰ Certain statutes expressly relating to service of process on corporations have been held not to apply to municipal corporations.⁹¹ The mere delivery of a copy of a summons to an officer of the municipality does not of itself make him a party so as to authorize him to file an answer.⁹² There is authority for the view that service should be made by an officer of the county in which defendant corporation is situated.⁹³

Service of process in actions in federal courts is discussed in Federal Courts § 124.

(2) Time and Place

Special statutory or charter provisions fixing the minimum time between service of process and the return date govern in an action against a municipal corporation, but, in the absence of statute governing the matter, the common-law practice controls. Usually service on defendant municipality should be made at its situs.

The number of days which must intervene between the day of service and the return day of a summons, in an action against a municipal corporation, may be governed by special statutory or charter provision.⁹⁴ In the absence of a special statutory provision it has been held that a statute applicable to individuals does not apply,⁹⁵ and that the common-law practice in the court of king's bench, requiring that at least fifteen days shall in-

Municipal corporation of another state

(1) It has been held that statutory provisions regulating service of process on a "foreign corporation" or on an "incorporated company" created or existing under the laws of another state do not apply to service on a municipal corporation created and existing under the laws of another state—City of Los Angeles, Cal., v. Eighth Judicial Dist. Court, supra.

(2) Such municipal corporation was not subject to such statutory provisions, notwithstanding it had entered the state of the forum in its proprietary capacity and had constructed an electric transmission line on public lands of the United States.—City of Los Angeles, Cal., v. Eighth Judicial Dist. Court, supra.

(3) The foregoing conclusion obtained notwithstanding a statutory provision that any municipal corporation organized in another state which enters the state of the forum for the purpose of doing business shall be subject to the laws of the state of the forum relative to taxation, police regulations, and all laws and reasonable regulations specifically applicable to any particular business or activity in which such municipalities may engage as the same are, or may be, applicable to foreign corporations doing like or similar business or work in the state.—City of Los Angeles, Cal., v. Eighth Judicial Dist. Court, supra.

tervene between the day of service and the return day, prevails.⁹⁶

It seems that usually service should be made where defendant corporation has its situs.⁹⁷

(3) On Whom Service to Be Made

Service of process should be made on the mayor or other head of a municipal corporation in an action against it, in the absence of statutory or charter provision for service on some other person or persons.

Service of process in an action against a municipal corporation should be made on the mayor or other head of the corporation,⁹⁸ except where, by statute or charter, provision is made for service on some other person or persons.⁹⁹ While the view has been taken that a charter provision as to who must be served prevails over a later general statute,¹ it has been held that a general statute designating the officers on whom service may be made is controlling as against an earlier charter provision regulating the matter.² Jurisdiction is not acquired by service on one other than the officer or agent named in the statute,³ or, where the common law is in force, on one other than the mayor or chief officer.⁴ Where a summons is served on the mayor, service on members of the board of aldermen or on councilmen does not affect the validity of service on the mayor.⁵

Where the act creating a quasi-public corporation does not provide for organization with any head officer, service on all the members is sufficient in the absence of proof of organization.⁶ It has been held that certain statutory provisions authorizing service of process on a domestic corporation by service on a specified officer of the state in certain contingencies do not authorize service on such officer with respect to a municipal corporation established by a private act of the legislature, where there have never been any officers of such municipality or any attempt to function by it, or in its behalf, and such private act does not designate any person on whom service may be made.⁷ A statute providing for service of process on an incorporated company created and existing under the laws of another state on a specified officer of the state in certain contingencies does not authorize service on such officer with respect to a municipal corporation organized and existing under the laws of another state.⁸

Failure to qualify, resignation, and vacancy; dissolution of corporation. Service on an officer elect before acceptance and qualification⁹ or on an officer whose resignation has become effective¹⁰ usually is insufficient, and the fact that there is a vacancy in an office on the incumbent of which process must be served does not authorize service on a different officer.¹¹ Where by constitutional or statutory pro-

Construction and operation of statute

(1) The word "may," as used in a statutory provision that service of process may be made on the mayor, city clerk, or city attorney, is permissive as to service on the mayor, city clerk, or attorney, but is mandatory in that it excludes service of process on all other officers or employees.—Brooke v. Brooke, 262 N.W. 426, 272 Mich. 627.

vision officers are to continue in office until the qualification of their successors, service is properly made on an officer whose stated term has expired, where his successor has not qualified,¹² and under such a provision service on those in office when there was an ineffectual attempt to dissolve a corporation is sufficient, if such service is otherwise authorized.¹³ It has been held that a person served as mayor of a defunct municipality has no standing to appear to set aside the service of process on him where he has no personal interest in the action.¹⁴

(4) Manner of Service

In the absence of statutory or charter provision prescribing the manner of service of process on a municipal corporation, the common-law practice must be followed; but, if the manner of service is prescribed by statutory or charter provision, due compliance with such provision is required.

In the absence of statutory or charter provisions regulating the manner in which process shall be served on municipal corporations, the common-law practice must be followed,¹⁵ but, where a statute or charter points out a particular method of service, such method must be followed,¹⁶ and a strict compliance is required.¹⁷

At common law service is properly made by reading the process to the proper officer,¹⁸ and under some statutes or charters service may be made by delivering a certified copy to the proper officer or officers;¹⁹ but a charter provision for the delivery of a certified copy of a summons has been held not applicable to an action of ejectment.²⁰ There must be due compliance with statutory provisions for service by delivering or leaving a copy of the summons.²¹

A statute providing that personal service on a domestic corporation is dispensed with where the corporation has ceased to do business and has no known officers, directors, or other legal representative, on whom personal service may be had, does not authorize service by publication on a municipal corporation established by private act of the legislature, where there have never been any officers of such corporation or any attempt to function by or in its behalf, and such private act does not designate any one on whom service may be made.²²

d. Return and Proof of Service

The return should show on what officer of the municipal corporation the summons has been served.

Usually a return should show on what officer the summons has been served,²³ but there is authority for the view that it is not necessary to show by the return the particular office occupied by the person on whom service was made.²⁴ A return that a summons against a municipal corporation was executed by delivering a true copy thereof to the proper officer of the corporation, naming him and giving him his official title, is a sufficient return without evidence aliunde that the person named was in fact such official.²⁵ An affidavit entitled in an action, naming a municipality as one of defendants, and averring that a summons and complaint were served on defendants and on members of the common council, sufficiently shows that the municipality was a defendant and was served with the summons and complaint.²⁶

Where, after an inaccurate return as to service of summons in an action against a municipal corporation has been made, the court permits an amendment of the return so as to accord with the facts and to conform to the statute regulating service, it is proper to override a motion to quash the service.²⁷

21. Personal service

Merely leaving a copy of the summons and complaint at the window of the office of the officer, on whom service is authorized, when no one is present in such office does not constitute personal service under a statute providing for personal service by delivering a copy of the summons.—Landsberg v. City of New York, 277 N.Y.S. 533, 243 App.Div. 740.

Leaving copy at office

Leaving a copy of a summons at the residence of a designated officer did not constitute compliance with a statute authorizing the leaving of a copy in the office of such officer with the person apparently in charge of such office, in lieu of delivering the copy to such officer, and did not constitute service.—Westport Tp. v. a. Objections and Waiver; Voluntary Appearance

A municipal corporation may appear to defend in an action notwithstanding it has not received formal notice; whether a particular officer of such corporation may waive service of process on it depends on whether such officer has been duly authorized in that respect, either expressly or implicitly.

The right of a municipal corporation to appear in defense of an action, even though it has received no formal notice, has been recognized,²⁸ and it has been stated broadly that a municipal corporation may waive defects in a summons and contest an action with the same effect as though it had been properly served.²⁹

It has been held that the officer on whom service may be made may waive service³⁰ by appearing,³¹ but the contrary view has been taken³² on the theory that an appearance, in order to operate as a waiver, must be by the corporation in its corporate capacity.³³ The right of officers, not designated in the statute as officers who may be served, to confer jurisdiction by the acceptance or waiver of service, has been denied,³⁴ and the rule has been announced that, where a liability is asserted against a municipality which, if not established, would be a liability of municipal officers, officers of the municipality may not waive the issuance and service of a summons in the absence of statutory authorization.³⁵ There is authority for the view that the appearance in a cause of the officers of a public corporation, in their individual capacities, does not waive defects in notice as to the corporation.³⁶

While a municipality may waive service of summons by filing an answer which shows for itself that it is an answer,³⁷ the mere fact that the instrument filed is denominated "answer" does not constitute a waiver or confer jurisdiction unless the instrument itself shows that it is an answer.³⁸

Official counsel or law officer. While there is authority for the view that appearance by the official counsel or law officer of the municipality³⁹ or his filing of an answer,⁴⁰ or both,⁴¹ constitute a waiver of the objection that there has not been effective service of process, it has also been held that in the absence of due authority he may not effect a waiver by general appearance⁴² or by a statement reciting an express waiver.⁴³

Defects in return. The failure of the return to show on what officer process was served is a defect which may be waived.⁴⁴

Authorization by governing body. The right of the governing body of the municipality to authorize a voluntary appearance has been recognized,⁴⁵ but a resolution authorizing a certain officer to confess judgment does not authorize him to waive the issuance and service of a summons or to enter a voluntary appearance.⁴⁶

§ 2206. Appearance and Representation by Attorney

The corporation counsel or attorney has the authority and duty to conduct litigation involving the municipal corporation or an agency thereof, and, in the conduct of litigation, the official attorney has the same power to act for the municipality as an attorney for a private person.

volving the municipal corporation⁴⁷ or an agency thereof.⁴⁸ A charter provision that the corporation counsel may, in his discretion, appear in any action against any officer employed by the city by reason of any acts done while in the performance of his duty by such officer, whenever such appearance is requested by the head of the department or bureau by which the officer is employed, invests the head of such department or bureau with discretion to determine whether the action is prima facie founded on an act done by defendant while in the performance of his duty, and such determination, followed by a request to the corporation counsel to appear and defend, is not subject to judicial review.⁴⁹ However, under a charter providing that the corporation counsel shall be the attorney for the city, and each and every officer, and shall conduct all the law business in which the city is interested, except as otherwise provided, whether such business is in charge of a single officer or board, and that he shall be the legal adviser of the mayor, municipal boards, and officers, and shall furnish them such advice and legal assistance as may be required, but prohibiting the corporation counsel from acting in any merely private litigation, it has been held that the law business in which the municipality is interested should be construed to mean a legal, and not a speculative, interest, and that the charter does not authorize the corporation counsel to appear for and defend a policeman sued for a willful assault in making an arrest.⁵⁰

The corporation counsel represents the corporation as a whole and not merely the municipal legislative body.⁵¹ However, the right of the governing body to control his actions in ordinary civil suits which affect the corporation as an individual or which relate to its business affairs has been recognized,⁵² but this right has been denied where the litigation relates to matters of police regulations and affects the public generally.⁵³ In the conduct of litigation, the official attorney has the same power to act for the municipality as an attorney for a private individual or corporation,⁵⁴ but ordinarily he has no greater rights in this respect⁵⁵ unless the charter under which he is elected or appointed confers such rights.⁵⁶ Unless the attorney has expressly been granted authority with respect thereto, he has no authority to surrender the subject matter of the cause of action,⁵⁷ and it has been held that he

Where city solicitor has full authority to act for the city and all its departments, the city cannot claim that it was without knowledge of the filing of an account in a decedent's estate where it was represented at the audit thereof by an assistant city solicitor who entered an appearance for the city solicitor, even though the assistant city solicitor was present to prosecute one particular claim and the city's claim of lack of notice is in respect of another claim, of which, however, the city solicitor's office was fully cognizant.—In re Kline's Estate, 46 Pa.Dist. & Co. 142.

Power to determine defense

It has been held that the corporation counsel has the power to determine the nature of the defense which shall be interposed to an action brought on a claim against the city.—Bush v. O'Brien, 58 N.E. 106, 164 N.Y. 205.

cannot waive the right of the city to appeal.⁵⁸ In the conduct of litigation the official attorney may be required to perform mandatory statutory duties.⁵⁹

Representation by other than official counsel and substitution. Counsel other than the official counsel or attorney may represent the municipality⁶⁰ with the consent of the official counsel,⁶¹ unless it is otherwise provided by statute or charter provision.⁶² The power of the official counsel, in the absence of a statute or ordinance to the contrary, to delegate his authority to another has been recognized,⁶³ but under some statutes his right to give an effectual consent to the substitution of other counsel has been denied.⁶⁴ A statute or charter provision barring representation of the municipality or an agency thereof by counsel other than the official counsel or attorney is subject to the express exceptions contained therein⁶⁵ and such exceptions as are necessarily implied,⁶⁶ as where fraud, collusion, or corruption is charged with respect to the doing or not doing of an act by the official attorney⁶⁷ or where the official attorney is called on to represent conflicting interests or is otherwise disqualified.⁶⁸ Under general rules, a formal substitution of attorneys has been held necessary where a change of attorneys by a municipal corporation is intended.⁶⁹

Authority to institute proceedings. While it has been broadly stated that it is the duty of the municipal attorney to institute proceedings for the recovery of municipal funds unlawfully diverted, paid out, or embezzled,⁷⁰ and while under some statutes the power and duty to institute proceedings on behalf of the corporation in certain specified cases is imposed on him,⁷¹ in the absence of due authorization it has been held that the official counsel has no authority to institute actions on behalf of the corporation.⁷² There is authority for the view that if a corporation counsel brings an action, although not directed by the mayor as required by the charter, defendant cannot take advantage of the lack of authority.⁷³

Presumption as to authority. In the absence of any showing to the contrary it will be presumed that a municipal attorney was authorized to appear on behalf of the municipal corporation⁷⁴ in bringing an action,⁷⁵ or in defending it.⁷⁶ Moreover, a presumption in favor of the authority of an attorney other than the law officer to bring an action may be indulged.⁷⁷

59. Validity of judgment

In an action by a city board to recover illegal expenditures, the failure of the city law director to cooperate with the attorney general and to perform the mandatory statutory duties resting on him to notify the attorney general of the filing of the action, keep him informed of its progress, and to submit the final judgment to him, did not destroy the validity of a judgment rendered against the city board in the absence of a showing of collusion on the part of the law director as counsel. —*Lynch v. b. Existence and Character of Municipality and Incidents of Incorporation

- (1) In general
- (2) Admissions
- (3) Plea or answer raising issue as to corporate character or existence

(1) In General

Where the court cannot take judicial notice of the fact of incorporation, the pleading must in some manner show corporate existence.

Where the statute under which a municipal corporation is incorporated is judicially noticed, it is not necessary to allege that it is a municipal corporation.⁷⁹ However, where the court cannot take judicial notice of the fact of incorporation, the pleading must in some manner show corporate existence.⁸⁰ There is authority for the view that, where the cause of action depends on the statutory class to which a municipality belongs, the complaint should designate the class,⁸¹ but where the statute requires the court to take judicial notice of the class to which a corporate party belongs it is not necessary to plead that fact.⁸²

The fact that an allegation as to the organization and the existence of the corporation is not direct is not necessarily fatal,⁸³ and particular descriptions of a party have been construed as amounting to an allegation that it is a municipal corporation⁸⁴ of a particular character.⁸⁵ A distinct averment of the existence of a municipal corporation is sufficient,⁸⁶ and it is not necessary specifically to allege compliance with each step in the process of organization.⁸⁷ An allegation by a city that it is a municipal corporation, and has been for a specified number of years, does not fix the date of its incorporation or preclude it from proving the true date.⁸⁸ An averment that a particular municipal board was "duly appointed, organized and acting as such under the laws providing for such board" is not subject to the objection that it does not aver that the board was a legally constituted one.⁸⁹

(2) Admissions

Where the municipal corporation appears and makes an affirmative defense, it admits its corporate existence.

Where the municipal corporation appears and makes an affirmative defense, it admits its corporate existence.⁹⁰ There is authority for the view that the fact that an action is brought against a municipality in its corporate name does not necessarily admit the legal existence of defendant.⁹¹ Defendant in an action by a municipality admits the corporate existence of plaintiff by setting up a cross demand against plaintiff in its corporate name, and may not question the existence of the corporation.⁹²

(3) Plea or Answer Raising Issue as to Corporate Character or Existence

Although there is authority to the contrary, it has been held that an issue as to corporate existence of a plaintiff municipal corporation is not raised by a plea of the general issue, and that a bare denial will not put in issue the corporate character of a defendant municipal corporation.

It has been held that an issue as to the corporate existence of a plaintiff municipal corporation is not raised by a plea of the general issue,⁹³ but the rule is not universal⁹⁴ and it has been recognized that the question is more or less affected by the provisions of the different codes.⁹⁵ A statute which requires the question as to corporate existence to be raised more specifically in actions by corporations, as discussed in Corporations § 1327, has been construed as applying to municipal corporations.⁹⁶ Defendant may by the plea of nul tiel corporation raise the question as to the corporate existence of plaintiff municipal corporation.⁹⁷

The rule has been laid down that a bare denial will not put in issue the corporate character of a defendant municipal corporation,⁹⁸ but defendant may, when sued as a corporation, raise the question as to corporate existence by a proper plea in abatement.⁹⁹ A plea which in one part denies corporate existence and in another part amounts to an admission of such existence is ineffective.¹

c. Designation and Description of Parties

The correct name of the corporate defendant should be used in the pleading, and, where an action is brought against officers of a municipal corporation as such, the word "as" should precede their official designation.

The correct corporate name of the corporate defendant should be used in the pleading,² and there should be a compliance with a statutory provision that a particular municipal department shall be sued in a specified name.³ Where an action is brought against officers of a municipality as such, the word "as" should precede their official designation.⁴ A mistake in the caption of the complaint in an action against municipal officers, as to their official designations, is not fatal if the allegations in the body of the complaint show with sufficient certainty the real capacity in which they are parties to the action.⁵ The complaint in an action by a corporation need not show the names of the individuals filling the offices of mayor and councilmen.⁶

Misnomer in obligation sued on. In an action by a municipal corporation on an obligation running to it in a wrong name, the complaint should aver that defendant bound himself to plaintiff by the name contained in such obligation.⁷

(1) In General

The complaint must allege all the facts on which liability may be predicated in an action by or against a municipal corporation.

Under general rules the complaint must allege all the facts on which liability may be predicated in an action by⁸ or against⁹ a municipal corporation. Where an action is brought on a claim against the original municipality, but after its consolidation with another municipality, the complaint must state facts showing that the cause of action accrued against the original municipality prior to its consolidation.¹⁰ Under general rules it has been held that plaintiff need not allege facts to show that his cause of action against a municipality is not barred by a statute of limitations.¹¹

Funds available and character of indebtedness.

While the rule has been laid down that it is not necessary to allege the amount in a fund from which the claim sued on is payable,¹² a complaint which shows that the debt on which the action is based was illegally contracted has been held insufficient.¹³

Venue. The venue is sufficiently disclosed by plaintiff's pleading where the action is entitled in a court of a particular county and in the body of the pleading defendant municipality, in which the facts constituting the cause of action occurred, is stated to be in such county.¹⁴

(2) Capacity and Authority of Municipality, Officer, or Board

It is usually held that where judicial notice is taken of the statute under which a municipal corporation is incorporated and of its powers, it is not necessary for it specifically to allege that it has legal power to sue, nor is it necessary that other corporate powers should be pleaded.

While there is authority for the view that, where the right of action against a municipal corporation depends on whether certain acts are within the scope of its corporate powers, facts from which the conclusion that the particular power exists may be drawn should be alleged,¹⁵ it is not always necessary for the corporation to show in its complaint that the transaction on which it bases its cause of action was within its powers.¹⁶ Moreover, it is usually held that, where judicial notice is taken of the statute under which a municipal corporation is incorporated and of its powers, it is not necessary for it specifically to allege that it has legal capacity to sue,¹⁷ nor is it necessary that other corporate powers should be pleaded in the complaint in an action by¹⁸ or against¹⁹ the municipality. Where an action is brought by the proper officer in the name of the municipal corporation, it is not necessary in the first instance to plead that the corporation authorized the bringing of the action.²⁰

(3) Presentation of Claim or Demand or Giving Notice

Where presentation of a claim or demand or giving notice, or rejection, is a condition precedent to the right of action or to the recovery of costs, performance of such condition or a waiver, or excuse for nonperformance, must be alleged in the complaint.

In accordance with the general rule, where presentation of a claim or demand or giving notice, or rejection, is a condition precedent to the right of action, as discussed supra § 2199, or to the recovery of costs, as discussed infra § 2214, presentation of a claim or giving notice²¹ within a specified time,²² and rejection or failure to adjust or to pay,²³ or a waiver, or excuse for nonperformance, of such conditions precedent,²⁴ must be alleged in the complaint. The complaint ordinarily should show notice or presentation to the proper officer or body,²⁵ but it has been held that an allegation that a notice was served on defendant municipality is sufficient to permit proof that the service was on the proper officer.²⁶ Plaintiff is not required to set forth in his petition, or to attach thereto, a copy of the written claim or demand which he presented as a condition precedent to the action.²⁷

A statutory requirement that the moving papers shall show the presentation of a claim to a specified officer and his neglect or refusal to adjust or to pay within a specified time has been held not applicable to a claim against an independent board which has a corporate existence separate from the municipality.²⁸

Failure to present claim as "bar." It has been held that the complaint must show due presentation under a statute providing that failure to present the claim within a specified time shall be a bar to an action against the municipality,²⁹ but in construing a statute making the failure to present a claim within a specified time a bar to the claim it has been held that the complaint need not show presentation,³⁰ and that the failure to present should be set up by defendant corporation, as discussed infra subdivision e of this section, these different conclusions being based on different views as to whether such a statute creates a condition precedent, as discussed supra § 2199 c.

Itemization and verification. Where a statute providing for the presentation of a claim as a condition precedent requires that the claim shall be itemized³¹ or verified,³² compliance with such requirements should be alleged in the complaint.

Time for investigation, adjustment, or payment.

The complaint must show compliance with statutory provisions for a specified interval between presentation of the claim and the bringing of action or for a specified time after presentation for payment or rejection.³³

e. Plea, Answer, and Affidavit of Defense

- (1) In general
- (2) Noncompliance with requirement as to presentation of claim or giving notice
- (3) Form and language

(1) In General

New matter or affirmative defenses must be specifically pleaded in an action by or against a municipal corporation, and a statutory provision requiring an affidavit of defense to be filed with pleas in certain cases has been held to be binding on a municipal corporation, although municipalities are sometimes exempt by statute from filing such affidavits in certain cases.

Under general rules, new matter or affirmative defenses must be specially pleaded in an action by³⁴ or against³⁵ a municipal corporation. A statutory provision forbidding an extension of time to a corporation to answer or demur in certain specified actions, except on notice to plaintiff's attorney, has been held applicable to municipal corporations,³⁶ as has a statute authorizing a judgment by default in certain actions unless defendant corporation serves with its answer or demurrer a copy of an order directing the issues to be tried, as discussed infra § 2211.

Statute of limitations. Under the general rule, a special statute of limitations must be pleaded by defendant corporation in order that it may claim the benefit of it,³⁷ but a failure specifically to refer to a charter provision fixing a special period of limitations in an action against a municipality is not fatal where sufficient facts are pleaded to indicate that the charter provision in question is relied on.³⁸

Affidavits of defense. A statutory provision requiring an affidavit of defense to be filed with pleas in certain cases has been held binding on a municipal corporation,³⁹ although municipalities are sometimes exempt by statute from filing affidavits of defense in certain cases.⁴⁰

(2) Noncompliance with Requirement as to Presentation of Claim or Giving Notice

Where a statute providing for the presentation of a claim does not create a condition precedent to the right of action, the defendant must raise the defense by proper pleading.

Where a statute providing for the presentation of a claim is construed as not creating a condition precedent to the right of action, as discussed supra § 2199, defendant must raise the defense by proper pleading.⁴¹ It has been held that in such case noncompliance must specifically be pleaded;⁴² but there is authority for the view that failure to present can be shown under the plea of the general issue, as discussed infra subdivision k of this section. Where presentation of a claim or giving notice is a condition precedent, compliance with the statute must be pleaded by plaintiff, as discussed supra subdivision d (3) of this section, it is not necessary for defendant corporation specifically to set up noncompliance in his answer,⁴³ and it may by demurrer take advantage of the failure of plaintiff properly to plead compliance, as discussed infra subdivision g of this section. In various cases in which plaintiff has alleged compliance with such conditions precedent, the answer of defendant has been held sufficient to raise an issue in this respect.⁴⁴ Where the pleadings of the municipality admit that the proper municipal official had neglected and refused to make an adjustment or payment within the time allowed by law, and the municipality desires to rely on a stipulation of the parties to show that the action was prematurely commenced, it has been held that the special agreement so relied on should be pleaded as an affirmative defense.⁴⁵

(3) Form and Language

The rule which requires a defendant to answer positively as to facts alleged in a verified complaint which are presumably within his knowledge has been held to apply to municipal corporations, as has a statute permitting a denial of any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief.

The rule under a statute which requires a defendant to answer positively as to the facts alleged in a verified complaint which are presumably within his knowledge has been held to apply to municipal corporations,⁴⁶ and in any event an answer that defendant corporation has no knowledge or information in respect of certain allegations and therefore denies them is insufficient where such a denial is not recognized by the statute.⁴⁷ Under other statutes, however, which permit a denial of "any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief," it has been held that a defendant corporation may make such a denial of the allegation of the complaint that a claim required as a condition precedent was duly presented;⁴⁸ but, in respect of an individual defendant in an action by a municipality, the rule has been laid down that such a denial as to the truth of allegations which relate to matters of public record, open by law to public inspection and with knowledge of which defendant is chargeable by law, is insufficient,⁴⁹ although there is authority for the view that this rule does not in every case prevent an individual defendant from using this form of denial of allegations with respect to matters of public record.⁵⁰

f. Reply

It has been held that a municipal corporation need not file a reply to a set-off, counterclaim, or new matter contained in an affidavit of defense.

It has been held that a municipal corporation need not file a reply to a set-off, counterclaim, or new matter contained in an affidavit of defense, whether or not the new matter constitutes an affirmative defense.⁵¹

g. Demurrer

General rules as to demurrers apply in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party, and, if judicial notice is taken of the charter, questions as to municipal power may be raised by demurrer.

General rules as to demurrers apply in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party.⁵² If judicial notice is taken of the charter, the question whether certain action was within the municipal powers may be raised by demurrer.⁵³ A complaint which shows on its face that the debt on which it is based was illegally contracted is subject to demurrer.⁵⁴ However, it has been held that the alleged fact that the municipal attorney has not been duly authorized to bring the action is not ground for demurrer,⁵⁵ nor is the failure to join, as a party to an action against a municipality, a board which had completed its duties in connection with the transaction involved, ground for a general demurrer, since the defect is merely formal.⁵⁶

Defect in designation of parties. In some jurisdictions the failure of the complaint to use the correct name of a corporate defendant is ground for demurrer,⁵⁷ even though the demurrer is not interposed until after appearance and pleading.⁵⁸

Failure to show performance of condition precedent. Where presentation of claim or giving notice is a condition precedent to the right of action, as discussed supra § 2199, a failure to allege performance of such a condition⁵⁹ within the time specified,⁶⁰ or an excuse for nonperformance,⁶¹ renders the complaint demurrable for failure to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action.⁶² A like rule applies to a failure to allege compliance with a statutory provision that no action shall be brought until the expiration of a specified time after the claim shall have been presented.⁶³ However, if one count of the complaint is based on a transaction as to which no claim need be presented, it is improper to sustain a demurrer on the ground of failure to present, even though other counts are subject to such objection.⁶⁴

h. Amended and Supplemental Pleadings

General rules as to the amendment of pleadings apply in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party, although it has been held that a municipality will not be so strictly held to promptness in asking for leave to amend as will an individual.

General rules as to the amendment of pleadings apply in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party.⁶⁵ Thus the right to amend the complaint so as to show compliance with a statutory requirement as to presentation of a claim or giving notice has been recognized or upheld where no allegation in this respect is made⁶⁶ or where the allegation is defective.⁶⁷ Likewise, the right of the trial court to permit an amendment adding an allegation that a certain board had unreasonably refused to audit and certify a claim has been recognized.⁶⁸ Where the court takes judicial notice of a municipal charter, it is proper to strike from the complaint as redundant matter recitations of provisions of the charter.⁶⁹ It has been held that a municipality will not be so strictly held to promptness in asking for leave to amend as will an individual.⁷⁰

Plaintiff protected against delay Where a city desired to amend its Amendments as to parties. In some jurisdictions amendments are allowed to set out the proper corporate title,⁷¹ and a petition against the trustees of a municipality may be amended under the code so as to make the municipality itself a defendant where the issues are not thereby changed.⁷² In other jurisdictions a complaint in an action by⁷³ or against⁷⁴ a municipal corporation, in which the corporate name is incorrectly stated, is not subject to amendment, as the action is regarded as a nullity; but, where the municipal corporation is a necessary party defendant and the complaint properly includes, as defendants, certain municipal officers, an amendment designating defendant municipality in its proper corporate capacity is permissible,⁷⁵ as is one which adds the municipality in its proper corporate name.⁷⁶ An amendment, substituting a municipality as a party defendant where a statute imposed liability on such municipality for previously accruing liability of another municipality whose territory had been absorbed by the substituted municipality, has been permitted under the code;⁷⁷ but no formal substitution is necessary where a new municipal corporation is organized which bears the same name as a dissolved municipal corporation and includes substantially the same inhabitants and territory, as discussed supra § 2204; and the view has been taken that a mere change in the name of a municipal corporation does not require an alteration in the pleadings.⁷⁸

i. Signature and Verification

It has been held that the pleadings need not be signed by an officer of the municipal corporation, and under statutes so providing certain pleadings should be verified.

It has been held that the pleadings need not be signed by an officer of the municipal corporation.⁷⁹ Under a statute so providing, the complaint in an action against a municipality must be verified.⁸⁰

It has been held that a pleading of a municipality may be verified on information and belief by a member of the common council.⁸¹ Certain statutes dispensing with proof of incorporation and of corporate existence in the absence of an affidavit of denial or verified answer or plea have been held to apply to municipal corporations,⁸² as has a statute providing that no "person" shall be permitted to deny the execution of a written instrument except by verified plea.⁸³ Moreover, under statute, a failure of certain persons sued as municipal officers to deny under oath their character as such amounts to an admission, and no proof of their official character is required.⁸⁴ There is authority for the view that a plea by which it is desired to raise an issue as to the authority of the law officer to institute an action on behalf of the corporation should be verified.⁸⁵

Effect of answer not sworn to. It has been held that, where a case is submitted on bill and answer, the answer of a municipality, signed by its attorney in his official capacity, must be taken as true, although not sworn to.⁸⁶

j. Objections, Waiver, and Cure

General rules as to objections to pleadings and waiver thereof apply in actions involving municipal corporations.

General rules as to objections to pleadings and waiver thereof apply in actions involving municipal corporations.⁸⁷ Thus a defendant corporation loses its right to object to an improper designation of itself contained in the complaint by answering, going to trial, and permitting the rendition of judgment in the proper name.⁸⁸ It has been held that by failing to raise the objection by answer⁸⁹ or demurrer⁹⁰ defendant corporation does not lose its right to object to a complaint which fails to allege the giving of notice, or the lapse of a specified time between the answer by introducing new matter which would compel plaintiff to re-notice the case for trial, and as a result set the hearing back on the calendar for a long period, the motion was granted on condition that the city agree to apply for a preference of the trial.—*Stemmler v. presentation of claim and the commencement of action,⁹¹ where these matters are conditions precedent to the right of action as discussed supra § 2199. There is authority for the view that plaintiff by admission at the trial may lose the right to rely on defendant's failure to plead.⁹² It has been held that a complaint which fails to allege due presentation of a claim is not aided by a verdict in favor of plaintiff.⁹³ In accordance with the general rule, defects in the complaint may be cured by the answer.⁹⁴ The answer of the municipality, where it is indefinite and uncertain,⁹⁵ frivolous,⁹⁶ or sham,⁹⁷ is subject to the same procedure as in the case of the pleading of an individual.

k. Issues, Proof, and Variance

General rules as to issues, proof, and variance apply in an action to which a municipal corporation is a party.

General rules as to issues, proof, and variance apply in an action to which a municipal corporation is a party.⁹⁸ There is authority for the view that a general denial will put a plaintiff municipal corporation to its proof as to every allegation material to its cause of action,⁹⁹ and it has been held that defendant need not specifically aver want of authority of an alleged agent for a body politic legally equivalent to a municipal corporation, in order to raise an issue as to such agency.¹ Failure of plaintiff to plead the presentation of a claim or the giving of notice which is a condition precedent to his right of action, as discussed supra § 2199, or to his right to costs, infra § 2214, renders proof of such presentation inadmissible.² Under a general denial, defendant municipal corporation may show any fact which tends to negative any element of plaintiff's cause of action which the latter was bound to prove in the first instance;³ and there is authority for the view that, under a plea of the general issue, a municipality may avail itself of exemption from suit on the ground that the act complained of involved the disbursement of the corporate revenue and was discretionary with the corporate authorities,⁴ and that under such a plea defendant may show a failure to present a claim where such failure is a defense to the action.⁵

Variance. Under the general rule, a material variance between the pleading and proof in an action by⁶ or against⁷ a municipality is fatal.

§ 2208. Evidence

General rules of evidence in civil actions ordinarily apply in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party.

General rules of evidence in civil actions ordinarily apply in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party.⁸

Presumptions. General rules as to presumptions in civil actions apply in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party.⁹ The presumption has been indulged that municipal officials properly performed their duties,¹⁰ that funds collected for any fiscal year were expended in payment of municipal demands which accrued during the year,¹¹ that a claim which was presented met the statutory requirements,¹² or that bills were properly audited when entered where such bills were entered as charges against a municipality.¹³

to which a municipal corporation is a party.¹⁴ Thus plaintiff has the burden of proving those facts which are essential to recovery.¹⁵ Where these matters constitute conditions precedent, as discussed supra § 2199, plaintiff must prove presentation of a claim or giving notice¹⁶ within a specified time,¹⁷ the rejection of a claim or failure to adjust or to pay,¹⁸ the lapse of a specified time between presentation of a claim and the bringing of action or the lapse of the required time after presentation for payment or rejection,¹⁹ or an excuse for nonperformance of such conditions precedent,²⁰ provided the claim of performance is controverted.²¹

A defendant municipality has the burden of establishing affirmative defenses,²² as has defendant in an action brought by the municipality.²³

While it has been held that, where defendant has by proper plea raised an issue as to corporate existence, a plaintiff municipality must prove such existence,²⁴ where the court takes judicial notice of incorporation it is not necessary to prove incorporation,²⁵ although the rule is otherwise where the court cannot take judicial notice of incorporation.²⁶

Admissibility. Generally speaking, if the proffered evidence is competent, material, and relevant to the issues, it is admissible;²⁷ otherwise it is not.²⁸

Weight and sufficiency. General rules as to the weight and sufficiency of evidence in civil actions have been applied in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party, and under such rules it has been determined that particular evidence is sufficient²⁹ or insufficient³⁰ to support or require a particular finding or result.

§ 2209. Dismissal and Nonsuit

Where the presentation of claim or the giving of notice and rejection of claim is a condition precedent, the defendant may take advantage of the absence of allegation or proof of performance of such condition by motion to dismiss the complaint, and the failure of the complaint to use the correct name of a municipal corporation has been held ground for dismissal on demurrer.

Under general rules, where the presentation of claim or the giving of notice and rejection of the claim is a condition precedent as discussed supra § 2199, and must therefore be alleged and proved by plaintiff, supra §§ 2207, 2208, defendant may take advantage of the absence of such allegation or proof by motion to dismiss the complaint.³¹ The failure of the complaint to use the correct name of a defendant³² or plaintiff³³ municipal corporation has been held to constitute ground for dismissal on demurrer.

Violation of debt limit

Municipalities which seek to escape liabilities, otherwise incurred in good faith and within their corporate powers, on the ground that they thereby violated the debt limit provisions of the constitution, have burden of proving every essential fact to establish the bar and are held to strict proof of existence of necessary facts; and this is true notwithstanding the principle that one who contracts with a city or town, by which an indebtedness or liability is created, must at his peril take notice of its financial standing and satisfy himself as to whether its debt limit is or will thereby be exceeded. —*Moore v. § 2210. Trial

In accordance with the general rules governing trials in civil cases, in an action to which a municipal corporation is a party questions of fact should be submitted to the jury under proper instructions from the court.

Except where it is otherwise provided by statute,³⁴ general rules as to the trial of civil actions apply in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party.³⁵ Accordingly, in such an action, questions of law should be determined by the court,³⁶ and questions of fact should be submitted to the jury³⁷ under proper instructions from the court.³⁸ Thus the charge should not be misleading,³⁹ and should not invade the province of the jury.⁴⁰ Even though part of a charge in an action against a municipal corporation is not entirely accurate, if the charge as a whole fully and fairly submits the case to the jury the defect is not fatal.⁴¹ In applying general rules particular instructions have been approved, or held necessary or proper,⁴² or have been disapproved or held unnecessary or improper.⁴³

Verdict and findings. General rules as to the verdict and findings in civil actions apply in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party.⁴⁴ Where the fact that a claim has not been presented is by statute made a matter of defense, the denial of a motion by defendant to direct a verdict on the ground that plaintiff has not shown affirmatively that the claim was presented is proper.⁴⁵

a. In General

Except as modified by statute, general rules as to judgments or decrees ordinarily apply in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party.

Except as modified by statute,⁴⁶ general rules as to judgments or decrees ordinarily apply in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party.⁴⁷

Where a judgment against the city directs that a certified copy thereof be delivered to the city council, compliance therewith is not essential to the validity of the judgment or proceedings to enforce it.⁴⁸

Arrest of judgment. A failure of plaintiff to plead performance of a condition precedent as to giving notice has been held to be ground for arrest of judgment.⁴⁹

Interest. A statute providing that judgments bear interest has been held to apply to judgments against municipalities.⁵⁰

b. Necessity for Process

Unless the court has acquired jurisdiction by due service of process or by a waiver thereof, judgment against a municipal corporation is improper.

Under the general rule, unless the court has acquired jurisdiction by due service of process or by a waiver by appearance or otherwise, a judgment by default⁵¹ or other judgment⁵² against a municipal corporation is improper.

c. Judgment by Confession or Consent

The right of a municipal corporation to confess or to consent to judgment or decree has been recognized.

General rules as to judgment by confession and by consent ordinarily apply in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party,⁵³ and in applying these rules the right of a municipal corporation to confess or to consent to judgment or decree has been recognized or upheld;⁵⁴ but where the court in which a judgment by consent is entered has no jurisdiction the judgment is invalid.⁵⁵ There must be an absence of collusion or fraud on the part of the municipal authorities who confess judgment against the municipality in order to render such judgment valid,⁵⁶ and it has been held that a consent judgment is void, or at least voidable, where it includes obligations which the officers giving the consent have no right to assume on behalf of the municipality.⁵⁷

Who may consent or confess. Under some statutes the governing body of the municipality has exclusive authority to confess judgment against the municipality.⁵⁸ In the absence of a controlling statute or proof of lack of authority, it has been held that attorneys representing the municipality may bind it by consent to a judgment or decree.⁵⁹ However, it has been held that an attorney representing the municipality is without authority to consent to a judgment which gives away the whole corpus of the controversy,⁶⁰ and under some statutes it has been held that the law officer acting alone has no power to confess or to offer to confess judgment;⁶¹ but with the consent of the officer who has authority to settle claims against the municipality the law officer may make such offer.⁶²

d. Judgment by Default

The validity of judgments or decrees by default against municipal corporations has been recognized, but there is authority for the view that the failure of the legal officer of the municipal corporation to appear, resulting in a default judgment, will be more readily excused than default by counsel for an individual.

General rules as to judgments or decrees by default ordinarily apply in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party,⁶³ and in applying these rules the validity of judgments or decrees by default against municipal corporations has been recognized.⁶⁴ There is authority for the view that the failure of the legal officer of the municipal corporation to appear, whereby an order by default is rendered against the municipality, will be more readily excused than where the default is that of counsel for an individual.⁶⁵ A statute authorizing a judgment by default in certain actions unless defendant municipal corporation serves with its answer or demurrer a copy of an order directing the issues to be tried has been construed as applicable to municipal corporations.⁶⁶ It has been held that the mayor of a municipal corporation has no authority to permit plaintiff to take a judgment by default against the municipality in an action in which a summons has been served on the mayor.⁶⁷

It has been held that a judgment should not be rendered absolutely against a municipal corporation on claims payable only out of a particular fund, nor should it award execution.

General rules as to the form and contents of decrees or judgments ordinarily apply in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party.⁶⁸ Where a municipality having an option of paying in money or in municipal orders fails to exercise the option, a money recovery may be had.⁶⁹

While ordinarily, in an action in personam against a municipality, the judgment should not direct payment out of a particular fund,⁷⁰ it has been held that judgment should not be rendered absolutely against a municipality on claims payable only out of a particular fund,⁷¹ especially where the fund is one over which the municipal officers have no control.⁷² However, a constitutional provision that no city shall incur indebtedness exceeding in any year the income of such year does not require that a judgment rendered for a past indebtedness shall provide that it be paid out of the revenues received for the years in which it was incurred,⁷³ and the judgment should be general,⁷⁴ but should be limited in amount to the amount of unexpended balances applicable to claims when such claims accrued.⁷⁵

Designation of parties. Ordinarily it is proper for the judgment in an action against a municipal corporation to follow the name of defendant as set forth in the summons and complaint.⁷⁶ Where municipal officers automatically become parties to an action against the municipality, in their official capacity, the judgment is not void where it is rendered against such officers, especially where the petition asks that they be required to act,⁷⁷ but where an action is brought against the officers of a municipality a judgment against the municipality cannot be rendered.⁷⁸

Provision for enforcement. The rule has been laid down that the judgment cannot award execution,⁷⁹ and in an action which has none of the features of a mandamus proceeding the judgment should not contain a provision ordering the governing body of the municipality to assess and collect a tax for the purpose of satisfying the judgment.⁸⁰

f. Lien, Priority, and Funds Applicable

The general rule is that a judgment against a municipal corporation is not a lien on its property held for public uses, nor is it a lien on privately owned real estate within the municipal boundaries. Judgments are not payable out of funds raised or appropriated for other purposes, and it has been held that a judgment does not take precedence over other claims.

The general rule is that a judgment against a municipal corporation is not a lien on its property held for public uses;⁸¹ nor is it a lien on privately owned real estate within the municipal boundaries.⁸²

Judgments are not payable out of funds raised by levy for another purpose,⁸³ or out of funds appropriated for another purpose,⁸⁴ or out of the general funds when chargeable only on the surplus fund.⁸⁵ However, it has been held that a statutory provision that indebtedness shall not be incurred or a warrant drawn in payment of any indebtedness to exceed the amount of funds on hand in the treasury at the time is not a limitation on the compulsory power of the courts to make effective judgments against municipal corporations.⁸⁶ The right to resort to a sinking fund for the payment of a judgment has been recognized.⁸⁷ Under some statutes the municipality cannot exhaust the entire revenue provided for unbonded expenditures with one class of disbursements and refuse to pay a judgment out of the revenues for the current year.⁸⁸ While the courts sometimes give a judgment priority over other claims payable from general revenues of the municipal corporation,⁸⁹ it has been held that a judgment does not take precedence over other claims.⁹⁰ Under some statutes current expenses have precedence over judgments;⁹¹ and it has been held, irrespective of a specific statutory provision, that necessary current expenses are entitled to payment out of the current revenues in preference to a judgment against the city for a tort.⁹² Some statutes and ordinances provide for the registration of judgments and for their payment in the order in which they are registered,⁹³ but the municipality cannot rely on such a statutory provision to resist the payment of a judgment merely because other judgments have been registered prior thereto in the absence of proof that the holders of such judgments are demanding payment.⁹⁴

Proof as to funds for payment. Under a statute so providing before judgment may be entered there must be proof that the amount for which recovery is sought remains unexpended to the credit of the appropriation to the object or purpose on which the claim sued on is founded.⁹⁵

g. Amending, Opening, and Vacating

General rules as to amending, opening, and vacating judgments apply in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party, and under a statute so providing a specified officer may proceed for the opening of judgments against the corporation.

General rules as to amending, opening, and vacating judgments apply in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party.⁹⁶ Under a statute so providing, a specified officer may proceed for the opening of judgments against the corporation,⁹⁷ but irrespective of the validity or existence of such statute it has been held that the court could on motion made on behalf of such officer vacate a judgment.⁹⁸ Collusion between third persons and municipal employees or officials not shown to have resulted in injury to the municipality is not cause for setting aside a judgment regularly obtained,⁹⁹ nor can a judgment entered against the municipality by consent be set aside in the absence of any irregularity, fraud, or mistake, simply because a new corporation counsel believes a better result can be obtained by contesting the litigation.¹ An application of a municipality pending appeal from a judgment against a third person to intervene as defendant for the purpose of opening the judgment has been denied.²

h. Satisfaction, Settlement, and Payment

General rules as to the satisfaction, settlement, and payment of judgments ordinarily apply in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party, and special provision is sometimes made by statute for the payment of such judgments, and it has been held that a municipality has no power to release or discharge a judgment against persons who are solvent for less than the full amount where no controversy exists as to the validity and binding effect of the judgment.

General rules as to the satisfaction, settlement, and payment of judgments ordinarily apply in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party.³ It is the duty of the municipality to make provision for the payment of valid judgments against it.⁴ Special provision is sometimes made by statute for the payment of such judgments.⁵ Thus, under some statutes, it is discretionary with the municipal authorities to provide for the payment of judgments either by a single payment⁶ or by payments in installments,⁷ but if provision has been made for payment by a single payment the right to pay in installments ceases.⁸ Statutory authority to pay judgments "against the city" does not include judgments against a special board.⁹ Payment of a default judgment obtained against a city based on an award is made at the city's peril where made pending an action to restrain the city from paying the award to the person to whom payment was made.¹⁰ The abolishment of a board which held a judgment against a municipality and the transfer of the powers and duties of such board to the governing body of such municipality has been held not to relieve the governing body from providing for the payment of such judgment.¹¹ Where the city corporation and the county organization are separate, county officers have no authority to interfere to prevent payment of a judgment against the city.¹²

While it has been stated that a municipality's power to sue includes the right to exercise discretion as to releasing judgments in its favor,¹³ and while it has been held that a municipality may accept less than the full amount where the judgment debtor is not able to pay the full amount and the corporation is not able to enforce full payment,¹⁴ ordinarily a municipality has no power to compromise and settle a final judgment in its favor for less than is due thereon,¹⁵ especially where the persons against whom it is rendered are solvent and responsible and there is no controversy as to the validity and binding effect of the judgment.¹⁶

Setting off debt due municipality. Under a statute so providing, it is lawful for the municipality to extinguish a judgment against it by offsetting and crediting the amount thereof on and against any overdue taxes, assessments, water rates, or other indebtedness of a public nature due from such judgment creditor.¹⁷

17. The expression "other indebtedness of a public nature," as used in statute permitting a municipality to set off taxes, assessments, water rates, or "other indebtedness of a public nature," against a judgment creditor's judgment, must be read, in consonance with the maxim of ejusdem generis, as though it were stated "other like indebtedness of a public nature," and, so construed, city's claim against individual as surety on indemnity bond of defaulting public official was not, either before or after it was reduced to judgment, within purview of statute.—Zane v. Brown, 8 A.2d 367, 126 N.J.Eq. 300.

enforced and collected in the manner provided by law, and in some jurisdictions there are special statutory provisions therefor.

Judgments against a municipal corporation must be enforced and collected in the manner provided by law.¹⁸ In some jurisdictions there are special statutory provisions for the enforcement or collection of such judgments.¹⁹ Unless the statute discloses an intention to make the method so provided exclusive, it will be regarded as cumulative to common-law remedies.²⁰ A statute prescribing the particular mode of collecting judgments against towns has been held not applicable to judgments against cities,²¹ but a statute providing a mode for enforcing the payment of judgments against counties and townships has been held to apply as well to judgments against cities.²²

Duty of officers to carry out decree. Where a decree requiring the performance of certain acts runs against the municipality alone, it is the duty of the proper officers to carry out the decree,²³ and they may be required to do all acts within their power to cause the municipality to obey the decree against it.²⁴

Judgment against municipality and an individual.

Where a judgment by default is recovered against a municipality and an individual, resort need not be first had to the property of the individual.²⁵ The right of a municipality to move for the enforcement of a judgment against other parties to an action to which the municipality was a party defendant has been recognized.²⁶

(2) Execution

As a general rule, execution cannot be issued or levied against the property of a municipal corporation in the absence of a statute granting such right, but this rule has been modified somewhat, and property owned by a municipality in its proprietary capacity and not useful or used for public purposes is ordinarily subject to execution.

As a general rule, execution cannot be issued or levied against the property of a municipal corporation in the absence of a statute granting such right.²⁷ However, statutes sometimes grant such right,²⁸ and without reference to statutory sanction the rule has been modified to some extent and municipal judgment creditors have been accorded a limited right to levy execution against certain municipal property.²⁹ The question whether or not

Rents

In absence of legislative characterization of stores in city building as public and a presumed legislative declaration that rent revenue derived by municipality from renting stores to private individuals was part of the public fisc of municipality, the court was without power, granted or inherent, to decree rents intrinsically public revenue.—J. B. McCrary

On the other hand, property owned by a municipality in its proprietary capacity and not useful or used for public purposes is ordinarily subject to execution.³⁵ In this connection it has been held that property used in the operation and maintenance of a municipal waterworks system is subject to execution.³⁶ However, it has been held that property owned by a municipality in its proprietary capacity for the purpose of exercising proprietary functions authorized by the constitution is not subject to execution,³⁷ and that, notwithstanding property is being used in a sense in a proprietary capacity, if it is being used for public purposes and to satisfy the needs and necessities which the public it serves demands, it is not subject to execution.³⁸ Thus, while the construction, operation, and maintenance of public utilities by municipal corporations for the benefit and convenience of their inhabitants ordinarily constitute the exercise of private and proprietary powers, as discussed supra § 1050, it has been held that property forming a part of a municipal waterworks system³⁹ or gas plant⁴⁰ is not subject to execution. The mere fact that the use of property for public purposes is temporarily or partially discontinued does not change the exempt character of the property.⁴¹ Property which has been acquired by a municipality for public use and has been in the past devoted to such use is not subject to execution unless and until it is shown that its devotion to such use has been entirely abandoned.⁴²

Part of building not required for municipal functions

(1) Proceeds from rental of part of building not required for governmental or municipal purposes, for which building was erected, but set off and equipped so as to reap income until necessary to occupy it in discharge of municipal functions, have been held not subject to execution.—Board of Councilmen of City of Frankfort v. White, 6 S.W.2d 699, 224 Ky. 570.

(2) However, where municipal authorities leased part of the municipality's city hall to private individuals for storekeeping, which was not a governmental function but a private venture, if not an ultra vires act, it was held that the municipality forfeited its immunity from execution by writ of fieri facias on rental return received from that part of building so rented, and, hence, such rental return was subject to seizure and sale under execution in satisfaction of an ordinary judgment against municipality.—J. La.—Bullis v. Town of Jackson, 14

Property fully conveyed by a municipality prior to the issuance and levy of a writ of execution against the municipality is not subject to levy,⁴³ and, if levied on, the municipality may in such case move to quash the levy.⁴⁴

The general rule is that the private property of individuals within the limits of the territory of a municipal corporation cannot be subjected to the payment of a judgment against the corporation by levy based on an execution against the corporation,⁴⁵ especially where the constitution so provides,⁴⁶ but, in the absence of such constitutional inhibition, a statute providing for the levy of an execution against the corporation on the individual property of citizens in certain cases has been held constitutional,⁴⁷ and given effect.⁴⁸

The right of certain officers to redeem municipal property from sale under execution, properly made, has been denied.⁴⁹

As foundation for mandamus. Under the practice in some jurisdictions, it has been held that execution may issue against a municipality not for the purpose of seizing and selling its public property, but for the purpose of laying a foundation for a mandamus proceeding.⁵⁰

Demand and refusal. Under a statute so providing execution may not issue unless and until payment of the judgment has been demanded and refused.⁵¹

Income or revenue from public property. Income or revenue derived from property held by a municipality in its governmental capacity has been held not to be subject to execution.⁵² However, it has been held that revenue derived from privately used public property is subject to execution.⁵³

Levy as creating lien. The actual levy of an execution on municipal property which is subject to seizure on execution creates a lien on such property.⁵⁴

Municipal declaration as to character of property. A declaration by the municipal authorities as to the character of property sought to be reached by execution does not clothe it with a character it does not possess,⁵⁵ especially where it is made after the levy of execution and contradicts prior official records.⁵⁶

Stay. General rules governing the stay of execution, as discussed in Executions §§ 139-141, have been applied.⁵⁷ The validity of execution against a municipality is not affected by the fact that the municipality was not served with notice of entry of an order vacating an injunction restraining the municipality from paying a judgment.⁵⁸

Where a municipality is the judgment creditor, it has the same right to control its judgment and to fieri facias as any judgment creditor,⁵⁹ and may cause a fieri facias once issued to be set aside.⁶⁰ against municipal corporations, unless such judgments are expressly excepted therefrom.

Dormant judgment statutes, as discussed generally in Judgments § 532 b, apply to judgments against municipal corporations,⁶¹ unless such judgments are expressly excepted therefrom.⁶² Accordingly, under the terms of some statutes, a judgment becomes dormant if execution is not sued out within a prescribed time.⁶³ In applying such statutes in jurisdictions in which execution is not available as a remedy to enforce a judgment against a municipality, as discussed supra subsection a (2) of this section, a judgment becomes dormant where no tax is levied and mandamus to enforce it is not brought within the statutory time provided for issuing execution in ordinary cases to keep the judgment alive.⁶⁴ A municipal corporation may be barred from relying on a dormancy statute on principles of equitable estoppel,⁶⁵ or by reason of an express contract,⁶⁶ and a judgment against a municipal corporation may be revived in the same manner as one against a private person.⁶⁷ Where the corporation has been dissolved by act of the legislature, and the same people and territory organized into a new corporation by a different name, scire facias to revive a judgment against the old municipality may be brought against the new one.⁶⁸ After the judgment has become dormant, the levy of a tax and payment on such judgment will not revive it.⁶⁹

§ 2213. Appeal and Error

Rules governing appeal and error in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party, in so far as they involve the application of the rules governing appeals in civil actions generally, are discussed in Appeal and Error.

Examine Pocket Parts for later cases.

§ 2214. Costs

Except as otherwise provided by statute, rules as to costs applicable in civil actions generally apply in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party, but the rule imposing costs on the unsuccessful party has been held not to apply where the municipality sues or is sued in the capacity of an agent of the state in the conduct of local government.

Except as otherwise provided by a valid statute,⁷⁰ rules as to costs applicable in civil actions in general apply in actions to which a municipal corporation is a party.⁷¹ Thus, the general rule that costs can be imposed and recovered only in cases where there is statutory authority therefor, as discussed in Costs § 2, applies,⁷² as does the general rule, as discussed in Costs § 8, that costs are imposed on the unsuccessful party,⁷³ and the exceptions thereto,⁷⁴ and a municipal corporation as the successful party is entitled to the inclusion of a counsel fee.⁷⁵ However, the rule imposing costs on the unsuccessful party has been held not to apply where the municipality sues or is sued in the capacity of agent of the state in the conduct of local government,⁷⁶ and, under a statute so providing, the municipality is not liable for costs in an action by it unless the institution of the action is duly authorized.⁷⁷ A municipality cannot be charged with costs where it is not a party to the proceedings.⁷⁸

Presentation of claim as condition precedent. Under some statutes costs cannot be awarded to one who sues a municipality unless the claim was presented to it in proper form before the commencement of the action.⁷⁹ Presentation must be made to the proper officer or board⁸⁰ in such a manner as to afford opportunity and sufficient information to the officer to whom it is presented to enable him to present it to the proper auditing officers and procure authority to pay;⁸¹ and, under some statutes, the claim must be verified,⁸² and must be presented by one asserting authority to act for claimant.⁸³ Where the claim is not presented and plaintiff is successful, neither party is entitled to costs.⁸⁴

Enforcement. It has been held that a judgment against a municipality for costs will not be enforced by execution,⁸⁵ but that the proper remedy is by mandamus to compel a levy.⁸⁶ Where the municipal corporation is entitled to the costs, suit should be brought in its name on an undertaking for costs given by the opposing party.⁸⁷ Where a municipal corporation as defendant is successful on appeal as against a codefendant and plaintiff fails utterly in the action, the appellate court may order plaintiff to pay the costs directly to the corporation.⁸⁸

XXII. CRIMINAL RESPONSIBILITY

§ 2215. Nature and Grounds in General

While a municipal corporation cannot be indicted for offenses which derive their criminality from evil intention, or which consist in a violation of those social duties which appertain to men and subjects such as treason, perjury, or offenses against the person, a municipal corporation is indictable for either nonfeasance, misfeasance, or malfeasance, in respect of public duties imposed on it by law.

While it has been broadly stated that a municipal corporation cannot be guilty of a crime either as a principal offender or as an aider and abettor,⁸⁹ and it is no doubt true that a municipality cannot be indicted for offenses which derive their criminality from evil intention, or which consist in a violation of those social duties which appertain to men and subjects such as treason, perjury, or offenses against the person,⁹⁰ it is established that a municipal corporation is indictable at common law for either nonfeasance, misfeasance, or malfeasance, in respect of public duties imposed on it by law,⁹¹ and modern judicial tendency, like public sentiment, is toward assimilating such corporations to natural persons in their liabilities, criminal as well as civil.⁹² However, its liability is to be confined to those of its acts which are of a private or proprietary nature, and it is not subject to indictment for the exercise or failure to exercise its governmental functions.⁹³ A municipality may be indicted for creating a public nuisance,⁹⁴ or for neglecting its duty to keep in repair its streets or highways,⁹⁵ to erect or repair municipal bridges,⁹⁶ or to construct and maintain in good condition a proper sewer system.⁹⁷ A town has been held liable to an indictment for not erecting a bridge ordered by the road commissioners.⁹⁸ It has even been held that a municipality is indictable for permitting a public nuisance to be maintained within the corporate limits, because it is vested with the power to enact and enforce ordinances for the preservation of the public health and for the removal of nuisances;⁹⁹ but this has been denied as involving a governmental function.¹ A municipal corporation has been held not to be punishable for a failure to perform a duty to put up signboards at railroad crossings imposed by statute on overseers of common roads.²

to share in the recovery.—Page v. Alexander, 177 S.W.2d 415, 206 Ark. 479.

§ 2216. Prosecutions

- a. In general
- b. Trial and evidence
- c. Fines, forfeitures, and penalties

a. In General

The indictment should be against the municipal corporation, and the necessity for various allegations in indictments charging various offenses has been adjudicated.

It has been held that the indictment should be against the municipal corporation and not against its inhabitants,³ or against the mayor and council;⁴ but it has also been held that, if persons named in an indictment for maintaining a nuisance are described as the mayor and councilmen of a town, naming the town, the persons so named are indicted in their corporate capacity, and not as individuals,⁵ and that the indictment or presentment need not allege in terms that the mayor and aldermen are an incorporated body.⁶ An indictment for failure to keep a highway in repair need not allege the authority by which the highway was laid out,⁷ or set forth the width of the highway.⁸ In an indictment against a town for not erecting a bridge ordered by the road commissioners, it is not necessary to set forth that the selectmen had, previous to such order, neglected to build such bridge;⁹ and it is not necessary in an indictment for a nuisance caused by a sewer to allege negligence in the adoption of the plan of the sewerage system or careless execution thereof.¹⁰ Where a notice, signed by citizens of a borough, requesting a constable to return a nuisance, is attached by the constable to his return, the notice is a part of the return and is sufficient to support an indictment.¹¹

General rules as to the trial and evidence in criminal proceedings generally have been applied in criminal prosecutions against a municipal corporation.

General rules as to the trial¹² and evidence¹³ in criminal proceedings have been applied in criminal prosecutions against a municipal corporation. An allegation or averment in the indictment, not necessary or material to a perfect description of the offense, but suited only to negative an anticipated defense, need not be proved in order to authorize a conviction.¹⁴ Where an indictment on behalf of an administrator to recover a statutory penalty for a defect in a highway, whereby decedent's death occurred, describes decedent as late of a certain county, the right of the administrator to prosecute the indictment may be proved by letters of administration granted by the probate court of another county.¹⁵ An ordinance providing a punishment for maintaining a nuisance within a municipality is not admissible in a prosecution against the municipality for maintaining a nuisance.¹⁶ In a prosecution for maintaining a public nuisance by allowing a street to remain in an unsafe condition, an instruction to the jury which outlines the facts constituting the offense need not use the words "common nuisance."¹⁷

c. Fines, Forfeitures, and Penalties

On conviction of a municipal corporation of an offense, it seems that the proper penalty to be assessed against it is a fine or a judgment for the abatement of the nuisance.

It is obvious that a municipal corporation cannot be imprisoned on conviction of an offense, and it seems that the proper penalty to be assessed against it is a fine,¹⁸ or a judgment for the abatement of the nuisance.¹⁹ Under a statute subjecting municipal corporations to a fine, penalty, or forfeiture for defects in highways, whereby loss of life has occurred, the amount of the amercement, within the limits of the statute, is to be fixed by the court in its discretion and not by the jury,²⁰ and the decision of the trial court as to the amount is final.²¹

MUSTER As a noun, a term sometimes applied to a troop of soldiers already enrolled, armed, and trained.⁴³

As a verb, to accept or approve the troops collected;⁴⁴ to call together a military force;⁴⁵ to enroll in service; to inspect and enter troops on the muster roll of the army; to summon together.⁴⁶ It would seem that the word "muster" may be used accurately in describing the gathering together of men by military order at the various camps for the purpose of selecting and later training those who on examination appear to possess the necessary qualifications.⁴⁷

MUTATO NOMINE DE TE FABULA NARRATUR. See 44 C.J. p 1499 note 95.

MUTE. A dumb person.⁵¹

In English criminal law, a prisoner is said to stand mute when, being arraigned for treason or felony, he either makes no answer at all, or answers foreign to the purpose with such matter as is not allowable, and will not answer otherwise, or, on having pleaded not guilty, refuses to put himself on the country.⁵²

MUTILATE. The term "mutilate," as applied to a person, means to cut off a limb or an essential part of the body;⁵³ to cut off or deprive of a limb or essential part of, as an animal body;⁵⁴ to cut or break off, or otherwise remove any part of;⁵⁵ to deprive of a limb⁵⁶ or some essential part;⁵⁷ to disfigure;⁵⁸ to maim;⁵⁹ to deprive a man of the use of those limbs which may be useful to him in fight.⁶⁰

As applied to an article, it means something less than total destruction.⁶¹ In the sense in which the word is generally used by law writers and by judges⁶² it means to render imperfect;⁶³ to render imperfect by cutting off or destroying a part;⁶⁴ to retrench, remove, expunge, or delete an essential or material part of, so as to render incomplete or imperfect.⁶⁵

Mutilated. Destitute or deprived of some essential or valuable part; greatly shortened.⁶⁶

Mutilation. A word sometimes used in the sense of a revocation.⁶⁷ As applied to written documents, such as wills, court records, and the like, this term means rendering the document imperfect by the subtraction from it of some essential part, as by cutting, tearing, burning, or erasure, but without totally destroying it.⁶⁸

The mutilation of an instrument, as distinguished from an alteration, is discussed in Alteration of Instruments § 1. The revocation of wills by mutilation is treated in the C.J.S. title Wills §§ 276-281, also 68 C.J. p 814 note 37-p 822 note 73. The mutilation of records as ground for denial of a discharge in bankruptcy is discussed in Bankruptcy § 520 c. For other particular references consult the Descriptive-Word Index.

MUTINY. To rise against lawful or constituted authority, particularly in the naval or military service.⁶⁹ "Mutiny" has been compared with "insurrection" see Insurrection and Sedition § 1 a. Mutiny in the military sense is treated in Army and Navy § 39; inciting to mutiny or engaging in mutiny on shipboard by seamen see the C.J.S. title Seamen §§ 259, 261, also 56 C.J. p 1139 note 7-p 1143 note 4, p 1144 note 41-p 1146 note 90.

MUTTONHEAD. A dull, heavy, and uninteresting person.⁷⁰

MUTUAL. Reciprocally acting or related; reciprocally receiving and giving; reciprocal; interchanged;⁷¹ reciprocally acting, giving, receiving, interchanging.⁷² It sometimes means substantially equal.⁷³ The word in itself denotes a common interest⁷⁴ and properly implies reciprocal action.⁷⁵

"Mutual" and "common" have been compared or distinguished, and the words have also been held to be equivalents or synonyms, see 15 C.J.S. p 590 notes 49, 52. "Mutual" has been contrasted with, or distinguished from, "equal" see 30 C.J.S. p 293 note 64.1.

N. The fourteenth letter of the English alphabet.⁹⁶ The letter occurs in various abbreviations, see Abbreviations 1 C.J.S. p 276 note 5.

NAG. To nag means, in common acceptation, to annoy by petty faultfinding or persistent scolding or urging; to be persistently worrying or irritating by continued faultfinding, scolding, or urging.⁹⁷

Nagging. It has been said that "nagging" is a very general and indefinite term;⁹⁸ but it also has been said that the term is of doubtful origin, and although it may not have been known at the common law it has been judicially and well defined and has come to have a definite meaning through usage.⁹⁹ Persistent urging amounts to nagging, and nagging is the exercise of domestic force by which the mind becomes irritated, disturbed, ruffled, wearied, and troubled, so that the judgment may become confused and the free action of the will is out of normal control.¹ The word carries with it the idea of continuity.²

Nagged. Irritated by persistent urging; persistently annoyed; disturbed; ruffled in mind; wearied; troubled.³

NAIL. A more or less slender, usually pointed piece of metal (rarely of wood), generally with a head intended to be struck by a hammer, used for driving into or through wood or other material to hold two or more pieces together.⁴

NAKED. Having on no clothes or covering; nude; bare; uncovered.⁵
